What I really took away was some tools I can use to facilitate that conversation which is priceless!""With the knowledge gained on some of the processes to acquire data, the use of the data, and the current climate in the city on who and how the | data can be shared across organizations, I foresee nothing but improvement on what this will mean for our organization. While our initial goal is to create a system, our ultimate is to find indicators that can help to better shape the products we have and services we use for our community. And the information attained at this conference will no doubt play a strong roll in how we as an organization grow and evolve.

"We are wanting to a complete assessment of all of our programs, evaluation tools and methods and what information we want to gather aside from what we have to gather for funders.  We want to find better ways to do this and tell the stories. "
